

General Employee FAQ

Syed Motors · Document Code: FAQ-01 · Type: faq · Department: All Employees

Purpose

This FAQ provides answers to common day-to-day questions employees ask HR, IT and Finance. It gives employees a clear starting point for routine requests and identifies the company channel or responsible person to use when further assistance is required.

The FAQ is intended for general employee use. Employees should follow the instructions provided for each question and use the relevant company portal or department process rather than relying on informal requests when a formal submission is required.

Where a question depends on a detailed company policy, this FAQ provides the basic process and directs employees to the applicable policy or department for further information.

Effective from the first working day of the current calendar year. Reviewed annually by the document owner and revised as necessary. Version 1.0.

1. How do I apply for leave?

Log into the HR portal, select Leave Application, choose the leave type, dates and reason, and submit.

Employees should provide the requested dates and a clear reason when completing the leave application. The application should be submitted through the HR portal so that the request is recorded in the employee's HR record.

After submission, the supervisor receives an email. The supervisor typically approves within one business day. Employees should check the status of the request through the available HR process rather than assuming that submission means approval.

For urgent same-day leave, the employee should call the supervisor directly and file the application by the end of the day. The direct call provides immediate notice, while the portal application ensures that the leave request is formally recorded.

Employees should use the correct leave type when submitting an application. If the employee is uncertain about which leave category applies, the question should be directed to HR rather than selecting a category without clarification.

Leave requests should be submitted as early as practical when the absence is known in advance. This gives the supervisor an opportunity to review the request and helps maintain an accurate attendance record.

If an employee needs to change or withdraw a submitted request, the employee should use the available HR process or contact HR for guidance. The employee should not create conflicting informal records outside the HR portal.

1. Leave — Common Questions

What happens after I submit a leave application?

The supervisor receives an email notification and typically approves the request within one business day. Employees should monitor the request through the applicable HR process and contact the appropriate person if the request remains unresolved.

What should I do for urgent same-day leave?

Call your supervisor directly and file the HR portal application by the end of the day. Both the immediate notification and the formal application are required for the stated process.

Where can I check the details of my leave request?

The leave application is submitted through the HR portal. Employees should use the portal's available leave information and contact HR if they need assistance understanding their record.

What if I am unsure which leave type to select?

Contact HR for clarification before submitting the request when possible. The employee should use the leave category that applies under the company's leave arrangements.

2. How do I claim my medical bill?

For confirmed employees, submit the original bill and prescription to HR within 30 days of the treatment.

The medical reimbursement process requires the original bill and prescription. Employees should ensure that both documents are available when submitting the claim to HR.

The 30-day period is measured from the date of treatment. Employees should therefore submit the required documents promptly rather than waiting until the end of the allowed period.

Reimbursement is processed in the next payroll cycle. Employees should understand that submitting the documents starts the reimbursement process but does not mean that payment is made immediately on the submission date.

Coverage limits and family definitions are provided in the HR Policy Manual. Questions about whether a particular expense or family member falls within the applicable coverage should be referred to HR and the relevant policy.

Employees should keep the information on the submitted medical documents accurate and complete. If HR requests clarification or additional information, the employee should provide it through the designated process.

2. Medical Bill — Common Questions

Who can use the medical reimbursement process?

The FAQ specifies confirmed employees. Further coverage information, including family definitions, is provided in the HR Policy Manual.

What documents are required?

The original medical bill and prescription must be submitted to HR.

How long do I have to submit the claim?

The documents must be submitted within 30 days of the treatment.

When will reimbursement be processed?

Reimbursement is processed in the next payroll cycle after the required submission is received and processed.

Where can I check coverage limits?

Coverage limits and family definitions are contained in the HR Policy Manual. Employees should contact HR if they need clarification about the applicable policy.

3. Where do I get my payslip?

Payslips are emailed to your company email on the 1st of every month and are also available in the HR portal under My Documents.

Employees should check their company email for the monthly payslip notification or document. The same payslip is also available through the HR portal under My Documents.

The 1st of every month is the stated distribution date. If an employee cannot locate the payslip, the employee should first check the company email account and the My Documents section of the HR portal.

Employees should use the official HR portal record when they need to retrieve a payslip rather than relying on an unofficial copy. If the payslip is not available through the stated channels, the employee should contact the appropriate HR or Finance support contact.

3. Payslip — Common Questions

When is my payslip sent?

Payslips are emailed to the company email address on the 1st of every month.

Where can I find an electronic copy?

The payslip is available in the HR portal under My Documents.

What should I do if I cannot find it?

Check the company email account and the My Documents section of the HR portal. If it is still unavailable, contact the appropriate support department for assistance.

Should I use an informal copy of my payslip?

Employees should use the company email or HR portal record as the official access route described in this FAQ.

4. How do I raise a grievance?

Start with your direct supervisor. If not resolved in five working days, escalate to HR through the grievance form on the portal.

The grievance process begins with the employee's direct supervisor. The employee should explain the concern through the normal workplace process and allow the supervisor the stated period to address it.

If the issue is not resolved in five working days, the employee can escalate the matter to HR through the grievance form on the portal.

The portal grievance form provides a formal route for escalation. Employees should provide a clear description of the concern and relevant information so that HR can understand what has already been raised and why further review is requested.

Anonymity is protected on request. Employees who require the request to be handled anonymously should indicate this through the applicable grievance process.

Employees should avoid submitting duplicate grievance records for the same issue unless HR asks for a new submission. If additional information becomes available, it should be provided through the appropriate HR channel.

4. Grievance — Common Questions

Who should I contact first?

Start with your direct supervisor.

When can I escalate to HR?

If the issue is not resolved in five working days, escalate it to HR through the grievance form on the portal.

Can I request anonymity?

Yes. Anonymity is protected on request.

What should I include in a grievance?

Provide a clear description of the concern and relevant information needed to understand the matter. The grievance should be submitted through the portal process when escalation to HR is required.

Using the FAQ

This FAQ is a first-level reference for common employee questions. It should be used together with the relevant company policies and department procedures when a matter requires detailed rules or additional approval.

The FAQ does not replace the HR Policy Manual or other controlled company documents. Where the FAQ directs an employee to a specific policy or department, that source should be consulted for the detailed requirement.

Employees should use official company channels for formal requests. Leave applications should be submitted through the HR portal, medical reimbursement documents should be submitted to HR, payslips should be accessed through company email or the HR portal, and escalated grievances should use the grievance form.

When an employee cannot complete a request through the stated channel, the employee should contact the responsible department for assistance rather than creating an unofficial substitute process.

Employee Responsibilities

Employees are responsible for providing accurate information when using the HR portal, submitting supporting documents within the stated time limits, monitoring formal requests where necessary, and using the appropriate escalation route.

Employees should keep their company email and HR portal access available for routine employee communications and records. If access problems prevent an employee from completing a required request, the issue should be reported through the appropriate support channel.

Employees should seek clarification when the FAQ does not answer a specific question. The document owner is the designated contact for questions or clarifications concerning this FAQ.

Approval and Ownership

This document is owned by the HR department and approved by the Branch Manager. Questions or clarifications should be directed to the document owner.

The document is reviewed annually by the document owner and revised as necessary. Employees should use the current version when following the processes described in this FAQ.

Non-compliance is a disciplinary matter under the HR Policy Manual. Employees are expected to use the stated company processes and provide required information accurately.
