

Employee Onboarding Process

Syed Motors · Document Code: PROC-01 · Type: process_manual · Department: Human Resources

Purpose

This process defines the Day-0 through 90-day journey of a new hire at Syed Motors. It covers IT provisioning, training, buddy assignment and probation gates so that a new employee receives the required workplace access, orientation and role-specific preparation.

The process begins before the employee joins and continues through the 90-day probation decision. Activities are assigned to HR, IT, the direct supervisor, the buddy and the employee as applicable.

Effective from the first working day of the current calendar year. The document is reviewed annually by the document owner and revised as necessary. Version 1.0.

1. Day 0 (Pre-joining)

HR sends the offer letter and joining instructions. IT prepares the laptop, email and DMS account. The direct supervisor identifies a buddy from the same team.

Pre-joining readiness

The purpose of Day 0 is to reduce avoidable delays on the employee's first working day. HR communicates the joining instructions, while IT prepares the basic technology access identified by the process. The supervisor ensures that a buddy is identified from the same team before the new hire begins.

The pre-joining stage should leave clear ownership for the next steps. HR handles the joining communication, IT handles the specified account and equipment preparation, and the supervisor handles buddy assignment.

Employee Onboarding Process — Pre-joining and Day 1

1. Day 0 (Pre-joining)

HR preparation

HR sends the offer letter and joining instructions before the employee's start. The joining instructions provide the employee with the information needed to report and begin the onboarding process.

IT preparation

IT prepares the laptop, email and DMS account. These are the technology resources expressly identified by the process. Preparation should be completed before the employee needs to begin role-related work so that the onboarding sequence can proceed without unnecessary access delays.

Buddy assignment

The direct supervisor identifies a buddy from the same team. The buddy provides a familiar point of contact during the initial period and supports the employee's understanding of the team's working environment.

2. Day 1

HR conducts the welcome orientation, company handbook walkthrough, policy sign-offs, ID card issue, biometric enrolment and workstation handover. The buddy takes the new hire on a branch tour.

Welcome orientation

The Day-1 orientation introduces the employee to the company and provides the initial context needed to begin work. HR is responsible for conducting the welcome orientation and handbook walkthrough.

Required Day-1 activities

The process identifies several Day-1 activities: handbook walkthrough, policy sign-offs, ID card issue, biometric enrolment and workstation handover. These activities establish the employee's basic workplace and administrative readiness.

The branch tour is handled by the buddy. It gives the new hire an opportunity to become familiar with the branch environment and the locations relevant to normal work.

Employee Onboarding Process — Week 1

2. Day 1

Day 1 establishes the employee's initial connection with HR, the workplace and the assigned team. The process separates formal HR activities from the buddy-led branch introduction so that both administrative and practical orientation are addressed.

Completion awareness

The employee should participate in the activities scheduled for Day 1 and raise access or onboarding questions through the relevant responsible person. HR handles the formal orientation activities, while the buddy supports the branch introduction.

3. Week 1

Role-specific onboarding starts during Week 1. Product training is provided for sales employees, service manual training for technicians, and DMS training for advisors.

Role-specific learning

The Week-1 training path differs according to the employee's role. Sales employees begin product training so they can understand the products relevant to their work. Technicians begin service manual training to establish role-specific technical understanding. Advisors begin DMS training to learn the system used in their work.

Requirement traceability

Every requirement is captured in the onboarding plan with source citations. This creates a direct connection between the requirement assigned to the employee and the source from which it was obtained.

Source citations should remain attached to the relevant onboarding requirement rather than being treated as general background information. This allows the onboarding plan to show where each requirement came from.

Supervisor and employee involvement

The direct supervisor provides role context and helps ensure that the employee's Week-1 activities match the employee's assigned work. The employee participates in the assigned learning and follows the onboarding plan.

Employee Onboarding Process — Probation Gates

4. Days 30 / 60 / 90

Structured probation reviews take place on day 30, 60 and 90 between the employee, the supervisor and HR. A signed probation-review document is filed after each review.

Day 30 review

The first structured gate occurs on day 30. The employee, supervisor and HR participate in the review. The review provides a formal point to discuss progress during the early probation period and to record the outcome in the required probation-review document.

Day 60 review

The second structured gate occurs on day 60. The same three parties participate: employee, supervisor and HR. A signed probation-review document is filed after the review, maintaining a documented history of the probation journey.

Day 90 review

The final structured gate occurs on day 90. The employee, supervisor and HR complete the review and use the documented probation record to support the final probation decision.

Document filing

A signed probation-review document is filed after each of the three reviews. The filing requirement applies at day 30, day 60 and day 90, creating a sequence of formal records rather than relying only on informal discussions.

Probation decision

Confirmation, extension or exit decision is taken at the 90-day gate. The 90-day gate is therefore the point at which the process records the final probation outcome.

Roles in the review

The employee participates in the review, the supervisor provides the direct work context, and HR participates as the formal HR representative. The process requires all three parties to be part of the structured reviews.

Employee Onboarding Process — Responsibilities and Reference

Process Responsibilities

The onboarding process depends on coordinated ownership across HR, IT, the direct supervisor, the buddy and the employee.

HR

HR sends the offer letter and joining instructions, conducts the Day-1 welcome orientation and handbook walkthrough, manages policy sign-offs, and participates in the day 30, 60 and 90 probation reviews.

IT

IT prepares the laptop, email and DMS account during Day 0 so the employee has the technology resources identified by the process.

Direct Supervisor

The direct supervisor identifies a buddy from the same team and participates in the structured probation reviews. The supervisor also provides the role context needed for the employee's Week-1 onboarding.

Buddy

The buddy supports the employee's initial team integration and conducts the branch tour on Day 1.

Employee

The new hire participates in the onboarding activities, completes the assigned role-specific learning, follows the onboarding plan and takes part in the scheduled probation reviews.
